

Building alibis and excuses is a deeply rooted habit. Habits are paradigms difficult to break and change, especially when they provide justification something I do and I really like to do.

